When do I need to qualify and for which Division of Oil and Gas programs must my company be qualified?

- All entities must submit an initial qualification packet, as outlined in this document, prior to:
 - Submission of a bid in an oil and gas or geothermal lease sale
 - Submission of an application for an exploration license
 - Submission of an application for assignment of working interest or initial separation of overriding royalty interest in an oil and gas lease, geothermal lease, oil and / or gas exploration license
 - All entities must maintain a current qualification status to hold, apply for, obtain or transfer a working interest or initial separation of overriding royalty interest in an oil and gas, gas only, or geothermal lease or exploration license, or permit

When do qualifications need to be updated?

Each year, any entity that holds an interest or plans to obtain an interest in an oil and gas lease, gas only lease, or exploration license, or permit must update their qualifications. Use the form included with this packet for annual qualification updates.

How can I tell if my qualifications are up to date?

The Division publishes an updated qualifications report each Monday. The report is located here. Should you find a discrepancy with your qualification information or if you have submitted qualifications updates which are not reflected on the most recent report, please send us an email at dog.qualifications@alaska.gov and we will respond to you within two business days.
